Matronae

Her warmth, her gentleness
her soothing voice, her tenderness.
All the things that left me bare
For which I never cared, Until they weren't there.
Her shyness, her slyness
The fierceness of her tongue.
Her words were sometimes hard and harsh,
Sometimes hushed in lullabies sung.
She was my reason for being,
The only one all knowing, my omniscient, best friend.
The way she guessed correctly.
Told me what I needed exactly.
Read my mind deftly, Gave me advice adeptly.
Our fights filled with repartee and teasing.
We found even the most mundane things amusing.
In my haste I forgot to breathe,
Chasing dreams while heart still grieves.
But in her words, so calm, so true,
I found the strength to start anew.
My flight or fight failed as her love prevailed.
The scurry of emotions engulfed me whole,
Losing her is now slowly taking it's toll.
It ended too quickly.
Our time together wasn't enough.
And now I am here picking up the pieces scattered around ordering myself to toughen up.
I miss her embrace, her scent, her love.
But it's all just memories now.
I hope she's happy above.
